CHAMBERLAIN DEFENDS OUSTER

'Dry Cold' Sends Mercury to 15 Below Zero Here

THERMOMETER GIVES MOST OF CITY SURPRISE

It Didn't Seem So Cold But Mansfielders Went to Work in Arctic Weather.

DEFENDS HIS READING

Weatherman Puts Aside Scoffs by Saying Moisture Absence Explains Puzzle.

Mansfielders may not believe it, but they went to work this morning in 15-below-zero weather, coldest with one exception that the city area has had in the past 15 years.

The 15-below mark, recorded at the outskirts of the city, was the lowest reported in Ohio and one of the coldest in the nation. It equalled the frigid readings in North Dakota and Montana which ranged from 12 to 15 below

The extreme cold, which settled over the city unexpectedly, seemed less severe because the air was still and dry, Enos Sprunger, the city's official observer, explained.

It was coldest at 8 a m, just after sunrise, and within an hour the mercury climbed 11 degrees to four below as the sun emerged from a heavy cloud of fog and smoke. By noon it had gone all the way up to 24 above.

Only once in the past 15 years —on Jan. 2, 1936, when it was 17 below—has Mansfield experienced colder weather, the official records showed.

Due To Leave.

The frigid wave struck Ohio late last night and it was due to leave today almost as quickly as it came, the weatherman said. He predicted cloudy with rising temperature tonight and Wednesday with light snow Wednesday night.

Ohioans can expect "normal" winter weather for the next several days, the forecasters said, since temperatures are moderating rapidly in the west and northwest and Ohio is due to follow suit.

A strip across northern Ohio was hardest hit by the cold, reports indicated Salem, in northeastern Ohio, reported 10 below, while Bowling Green, in the northwest corner of the state, had nine below at 8 a.m. It was four below in Bucyrus and two below in Canton.

Canton reported the worst smoke-fog combination in years. The dense fog slowed traffic and shut out the sun for several hours this morning.

PACT COLLAPSES

U. S. Trade Negotiations With Uruguay Break Down.

WASHINGTON —(AP)— Negotiations for a reciprocal trade treaty between the United States and Uruguay have broken down, on top of the collapse of efforts to reach an agreement with Argentina.

The Argentine negotiations were ended last week-end after disagreement over placing customs quotas on typical Argentine products such as linseed and canned beef.

Because of the similarity in important respects of the export trade of Uruguay and Argentina," the state department said, "it has been found necessary in view of the recent termination of negotiations with Argentina to terminate also the negotiations with Uruguay."

Congressmen from cattle raising states had opposed agreements with both countries.

Democratic Dinners In Washington, Cleveland, Columbus Reveal 3rd Term Hopes of Party Leaders.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—The cabinet's third term boom reverberated today in the aftermath of Jackson day addresses which sought to draft President Roosevelt while he spoke philosophically here of the responsibilities of high office.

He had promised a non-partisan speech and made good with little or no partisanship in his remarks before a glittering $100-a-plate audience which included some big social and money names as well as those of politics.

Mr. Roosevelt defended the achievements of his administration and told his listeners here and, by radio, at other Jackson day dinners that the Democratic party had created "out of the funk —the pure unadulterated funk—of the early thirties . . . a new spirit with which we can now face the forties."

"The people of this country of ours," he said, "recognize two facts today:

"The first is that the world outside our hemisphere is in really bad shape. . . . It is a fact so big in its effect on the future of the world that all our little partisan squabbles are a bit drab in the light of it.

"The second is that we have made great gains at home in our own economic prosperity and in the security of our individual citizens These gains must not be chipped away; they must be only a foundation on which to build greater gains."

Mr. Roosevelt chided Republican leaders—Sens. Charles L McNary, Ore., and Warren R. Austin, Vt., and Rep. Joseph W. Martin, jr., Mass.—for rejecting the invitation to attend last night's Washington dinner. Chairman Homer S. Cummings—former attorney general—of the Washington banquet, directly rebuked the trio:

"I think," he said, "they missed their cue when they turned aside from a gesture of goodwill and failed to do their part, in a troubled time, to demonstrate the inward unity of purpose of the world's greatest democracy."

The speeches began with several good-natured jibes at potential presidential candidates for 1940

Democratic Committee Chairman James A. Farley, in introducing the president, addressed his "fellow candidates," and Roosevelt prefaced his remarks with:

"Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, and candidates here and candidates there."

Mr. Roosevelt's address was pitched in a key of democracy's purposeful unity but spiced with good humor and without hint of his own political intentions in 1940. Because of its philosophical character, the address aroused somewhat less enthusiasm than have the president's hard hitting political or campaign utterances as when a year ago at the Jackson day gathering he brusquely invited conservatives to desert the party and summoned liberals and progressives to rally around the New Deal-Democratic standard.

Hint at Drafting President

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS—Central Ohio Democratic leaders heard pleas for party harmony and broad hints that President Roosevelt could be drafted for a third term at a $25-a-plate Jackson day dinner last night.

Standing under a spotlighted picture of the president, Rep. Luther Patrick (D., Ala.) told a group overflowing a Neil House ballroom:

"I think he can be drafted. This is one time we don't need to change leaders in the White House."

His remarks corresponded with those of other speakers at similar banquets over the nation at which leaders sought to raise funds for party debt liquidation and campaign expenses.

Sharing the Columbus speaking program with Patrick was Charles Sawyer of Cincinnati, Democratic national committeeman, who called for a united party front at the May primary.

Hopes F.D.R. Delays Decision

(By Associated Press)

CLEVELAND—Robert H. Jackson, the nation's new attorney general, hopes President Roosevelt will withhold a decision on running for a third term.

Addressing northern Ohio Democrats at a Jackson day banquet here last night, the present solicitor general declared:

"We don't want the greatest asset of the Democratic party put in hock. The American people want Mr. Roosevelt, before he decides on whether he will retire, to know such important things as these—the state of the international situation, what issues arise in congress affecting his program and the public welfare; and more than all, what would be the consequences of his decision in terms of party policy and leadership."

Jackson, whose nomination to the top post of the justice department is pending in the senate, said he did not know what the president's answer would be.

He indicated that, as far as he knew, President Roosevelt had not made up his mind, adding he hoped the president would not "even make within himself any decision at this time."

He declared, "The New Deal must go forward—not perhaps at the same pace, and certainly not without heed to the lessons of its own experience."

Jackson said it was futile to expect to win elections by converting Republicans, asserting:

"It is plain that our chances depend on a candidate and a program that will reach down into the precincts with an appeal to the average man and woman strong enough to overcome all lethargy and bring them to the polls."

Bromfield Agrees To Run For 17th District Congress Seat

Louis Bromfield, Mansfield's son who has distinguished himself in the field of letters, today had apparently succumbed to the blandishments of Roe Wolfe, Ashland county Democratic chairman, urging him to toss his hat into the 17th district congressional ring.

Bromfield

Wolfe announced today that he had won the novelist's consent to run for congress after he had talked to him by telephone. Bromfield, who has been in California since Nov. 1, writing a motion picture play, called Wolfe from Palm Springs

Bromfield, a resident of Richland county, has had no communication with Richland county party leaders, so far as could be learned today.

Bromfield was quoted in dispatches from Palm Springs, as saying he would base his campaign on a platform calling for federal assistance to farmers.

A gentleman farmer himself, Bromfield was also quoted as saying that he "hoped President Roosevelt would run again." Bromfield is a staunch New Dealer.

Bromfield undoubtedly will find himself in a multi-entry field in seeking the Democratic nomination. Charles West, former congressman, and also a strong New Dealer is expected to be a candidate, and others who have not yet announced are expected to get into the race.

GLATTKE ASKS $200,000 FOR NEW HOSPITAL

O. S. R. Superintendent Renews Request for Building to Care for Ailing.

MAPS $350,000 PROGRAM

Superintendent Tells Director Cafeteria Project Saved $28,471 During Year.

A renewed request for the construction of a new hospital, estimated to cost $200,000 topped the list of recommendations for improvements at Ohio State reformatory submitted to State Welfare Director Charles L. Sherwood today by Supt. Arthur L. Glattke.

In all, suggested improvements totaling more than $350 000 were incorporated in the report.

According to the report the last major improvement at the institution was the construction of a new dining hall which was placed in operation in December 1938, and which Glattke said resulted in savings of $28,471 during the past 12 months.

Operating on a cafeteria basis, each inmate is permitted to take as much food as he can eat, meats and dessert excepted, but he is required to eat all he takes, Glattke said.

Operates at Saving.

"Despite the fact that we are serving more food to each inmate than we were a year ago we are able to show a substantial savings in the 1939 expenses," the superintendent reported.

He explained that the savings was made possible through more economical preparation and supervision obtained by the new equipment.

Among the other items recommended for improvement was the installation of new boiler equipment, $75,000; alteration of the old dining room for use as a library and a gymnasium, $10,000, new automatic telephone equipment, $7,000; two new elevators in the administration building, $3,000; reconstruction of drive and roadways, $10,000; rewiring of administration building and cell blocks for alternating current, $11,000; rehabilitate sewer sys-

Chamberlain backed up his ouster indirectly, saying he would continue to do what he thought was right. British labor leaders are asking an investigation by parliament. Hore-Belisha has been replaced by Oliver Stanley, former board of trade president, lower left. Just before the dismissal of Hore-Belisha there had been rumors of dissension between the war secretary and Viscount Gort, top center, commander-in-chief of British armed land forces. FREE 24 HOURS, INMATES JAILED

O. S. R. Fugitives Who Fled in Stolen Car Captured by Dayton Police.

Captured less than 24 hours after they escaped from their cell block by squeezing through a small ventilator shaft, two Ohio State Reformatory inmates were returned to Mansfield from Dayton today.

Their brief escapade will cost them two years in additional confinment in addition to probable prosecution on charges of auto stealing.

The inmates, James Mayer, 21, and Frank Grigsby, 21, both of Montgomery county, were apprehended at Dayton last night as they fled from a stalled automobile, which police here said was stolen from the garage of Charles Zitzer, 321 Park avenue west, Sunday night.

Two reformatory officers and Zitzer went to Dayton this morning to return the fugitives and the automobile.

Auto theft charges will probably be filed against the pair, Police Chief M. K. Bates said.

Mayer and Grigsby were the first inmates to escape from inside the reformatory walls in more than a year.

Supt. Arthur L. Glattke said the inmates pried an iron gratung off the ventilator shaft with a bar made of scrap iron about 18 inches long. The bar was found near the open ventilator when guards discovered the escape. It was not determined where they had obtained the bar.

To free themselves through the ventilator opening which extends through the reformatory

State Sets Feb. 1 As Date To Hear Appeal of Mrs. Metcalf

An appeal hearing for Mrs. Edith Metcalf, Mansfield, from dismissal as a sales tax examiner was set today for Feb. 1 at the Richland county courthouse, the state civil service commission announced at Columbus.

The commission members will come to Mansfield to conduct the hearing on the appeal which was filed last Oct. 23, two days after Mrs. Metcalf was discharged.

The dismissal charge accused her of political activity in behalf of Democratic candidates while she was holding the job. She denied the accusation.

Mrs. Metcalf was among several state employes appointed under civil service who appealed to the commission after they were dismissed by the Republican state administration.

Appointed in February, 1935, under the administration of former Governor Martin L. Davey, she was junior sales tax examiner in the Norwalk district when she was dismissed.

She said today that Attys. Lewis Brucker, Mansfield, and W. S Pealer of Columbus will defend her at the hearing.

Prime Minister Echoes French Idea and Co-operation Will Outlive Fighting.

(By United Press)

LONDON—Defending indirectly his dismissal of Leslie Hore-Belisha as war secretary, Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain in a "win the war" speech said today that he would "do what I feel to be right, no matter how difficult or even disagreeable that may be."

Chamberlain paid tribute to Finland in her resistance to Russia in a radio report to the nation and proclaimed British aid to Finland will be no "mere formality."

Chamberlain echoed a prediction by French Edouard Daladier that some kind of federal union in Europe may result from the war. He said that the Englo-French economic and financial collaboration could be extended to other nations of Europe and perhaps to the whole world.

He continued his speech calmly after a defective light bulb had set fire to woodwork over the platform on which he was standing.

He asserted the sole purpose of his government was to win the war and he warned that the present lull in hostilities in the west "is the quiet calm before the storm."

Chamberlain said that Franco-British collaboration has been "so valuable that when the war is over neither of us will want to give it up."

Chamberlain admitted if there is any lack of understanding on the part of the British public of the war aims and policies of Chairman Carl Vinson (D. Ga.) said that it was "resting very carefully in the basket," and that he did not contemplate introducing a bill at present.

Meanwhile, the committee recalled Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations, for questioning on Vinson's bill for a $1,300,000,000 expansion of naval authorizations in categories below the battleship class.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

"My dear Madge!" she said her rich contralto voice vibrant with emotion, "Do you think I am a woman who needs to have something of the spirit which is infinitely beautiful tranlated into coin of the realm?"

I looked at her still lovely face, swept now with emotion, and my mental barometer began to rise again.

"What-what do you mean?" I stammered banally.

"I mean," she said slowly, "that Philip's wonderful gesture, and your equally wonderful crucifixion of your instincts, have not been in vain."

"Oh!" I breathed. "Olga! Can it be that you?"

Her smile was something to remember so radiant and tender it was.

"Yes, dear Madge," she said. "What you have told me has made me come to a decision. Your perceptions are so keen that I know you have realized how strongly my heart has battled against my pride in this affair."

I nodded. "Yes, I know," I said softly.

She released my shoulders, and, stepping back, seated herself in her chair again. Then she leaned forward, her eyes intent upon mine.

"On two things I was determined until five minutes ago," she said. "One was that before marrying Philip I must be sure that it was love, not chivalry which was prompting his offer of marriage. As it is, I do not know that I can ever forget the look on his face when he first saw me stumbling along the deck of his yacht after our rescue from the ship of our kidnapers. For a fleeting second there was actual revulsion in his face at my hag-like appearance. I could not blame him neither could I accept his later declaration of love that never had ceased."

Her lovely triante voice was suddenly silent, but I felt instinctively that my cue was also silence, and in another half second she went on.

"My second resolution concerned my financial straits. I was determined that I would not come to Philip a penniless bride, but I realize now that, primarily, my feeling had its roots in the other fear, that he really did not love me any more."

"But now, thanks to your revelation I am convinced. Nothing but a great love could prompt such a gesture as Philip is planning, and in the face of that my own pride must capitulate. Tell me! He has not yet placed the order for the emeralds, has he?"

"No," I replied promptly, trying to keep my voice steady in the face of this thrilling news. "He is waiting for me to tell him the name of the jeweler from whom the emeralds were bought."

"Then," she said, "there is no time to be lost. You said he was coming here this morning?"

"Yes," I answered, "to see Olina, at her request, and I heard him stipulate that he must see you also."

"At half after ten. I think you said."

"Yes, that was the hour."

She looked at her watch.

"I have time to dress as well as to ask you another question," she said smiling. "Have you any idea of what Olina wishes to ask Philip this morning? You said she told him, after she had reported she could not get what he wanted from you, that she wished very much to see him."

"Mary says," I answered, "that Olina wishes a part in one scene of my play where she can play a harp."

DRIVER NEUTRAL

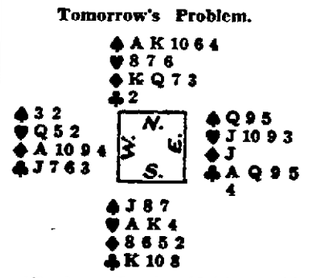
Tomorrow's Problem.



(Dealer: South. Neither side vulnerable.)

If the defenders take the diamond A, a diamond ruff and the club A, then lead another club, how should North try for a double squeeze to make 4-Spades, and how can West thwart him?

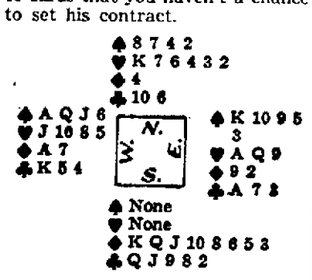
BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

BY Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

THE LATE INTERRUPTER

IF ONE of your opponents has kept silent in the early bidding, then unexpectedly jumps in with a call at some high level, it is well to pause and think. Maybe he is offering you a chance for a luscious double which will produce more points than were originally dealt to you. Or perhaps he knows his business, and has purposely adopted delaying tactics to tempt you into letting him play the hand. He may have such a long string of cards that you haven't a chance to set his contract.



(Dealer: North. Neither side vulnerable.)

After North's pass here and East's 1-Spade, South decided to go deceptive. Though he seemed able to lay his hand down for 4-Diamonds, he passed. West, with his powerhouse opposite an opening bid which he fitted perfectly, felt slammish and so forced with 3-Hearts. East showed rebiddability with 3-Spades and then South cut in with 4-Diamonds.

This put West into an awful stew. He knew South as a trickster who was always trying to interfere with his opponents' easy bidding, and decided this was the time to punish the varmit. "Double," he said, foreseeing a juicy set, and of course everybody passed. Needless to say, South made his contract without effort.

East and West can make 5-Spades against perfect defense, and a small slam if North is foolish enough to cover one of the heart leads with his K, which would set up a chance to get a club discard.

HOROSCOPE

For Wednesday, Jan. 10

Generally propitious and progressive configurations contribute to make this a pleasant, profitable and satisfactory day, despite some trivial delays or obstacles, which might be due to a depressed physical condition. It is a particularly favorable time for dealing with large corporations, big business, political, diplomatic or fraternal organizations, regarding promotion or financial support in putting over new projects of importance. Move toward high goals with assurance and initiative.

Those whose birthday it is may look forward to a generally progressive and fortunate year, with much success in dealing with those in influential positions whose co-operation may be desired for developing new projects of major importance. Government, political or secret bodies may be approached for favors with confidence. There may be interference with such ambitious plans by a depressed physical or mental condition unless these be safeguarded.

A child born on this day may be ambitious and capable, with splendid creative and executive ability, which may attract the support and friendly co-operation of those in influence and standing.

By MME QUI VIVE

When your head comes out of the shampoo bowl and you look into the mirror to behold a stringy floor mop with your face in the middle of it, aren't you glad you don't have to be as nature made you? When you get up on a dreary morning, after a merry evening, find your complexion grey because of the clouds of fatigue that have descended upon it, aren't you grateful that some bright mind devised the rouge pad and the lipstick? And don't you love the darling old dodos who claim that when beauty is unadorned it is adorned the most? Phooey to that!

Nature puts beautiful plumage on birds, flings gorgeous colors in sunset skies, produces flowers so lovely that they move one to tears. But she's not always so successful with human beings. What about eyebrows that hold hands just north of the impertinent nose? It's grand that we can give them a divorce with the tweezers, display eye lamberquins of more graceful outline. And crooked teeth. Nature gives them to us, the dentist lines them up. As for fuzzers on ladies' lips and chins, they are certainly a slip up. One hustles away to the operator with the electric needle, has them electrocuted, and thanks goodness that one doesn't have to trail through life looking like the bearded lady.

There's the permanent wave, a blessing if there ever was one: it means more to women than the vote. Straight hair does not lend itself to the enchanting arrangements that are possible when it has gone through the parboiling process. Nature is stingy with ringlets, only the favored few having them. You visit the beauty shop, go in straight, come out curly. Elegant!

BIDS FOR TOURISTS

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — (U.P.) — Alabama has dispatched two of its white state highway patrol cars, laden with literature about the state, on a 6,000-mile tour through northern cities to make a bid for the 1940 tourist trade.

THEATERS

FRANK MORGAN and Joseph Schildkraut, who are together in "The Shop Around the Corner" are working together for the first time since they were in the same stage play, "The Prodigal Son," 25 years ago. Margaret Sullavan and James Stewart are co-starred in the picture . . . Robert Montgomery, who has finished "The Earl of Chicago" has gone to England to make two M-G-M pictures, "Busman's Honeyman" and "I Had a Comrade." . . . Vera Zorina doesn't smoke and refuses to do it even for scenes in "I Was an Adventuress." Must be an old Scandinavian custom. Sonja Henie doesn't either . . . Douglas Fairbanks, jr., scotches rumors that he will remake his late father's screen success, with a beautiful compliment: "I'll never do it. To follow him would be impossible for his step was so light and airy that he left no prints behind."

"The Women" at Ritz.

A bona fide all-star cast of women, plus a tremendously interesting story, made "The Women" one of the outstanding pictures of 1939. There were 21 feminine players in it, all of whom either are top ranking solo stars or star character players. Just to name a few there are Norma Shearer, Joan Crawford, Rosalind Russell, Paulette Goddard, Mary Boland and little Virginia Weidler. There are no men in the picture although it is all about men. "The Women" opens at the Ritz Wednesday for two days. "The Jones Family in Hollywood" is also booked.

Romantic Comedy.

Up one Alp and down another, Robert Young pursues the girl of his choice, Annabella, while his fluttery mother, Billie Burke, pursues a noted psychologist, Walter Connolly, in "Bridal Suite," at the Majestic. This romantic comedy is accompanied by "Each Dawn I Die" as a second feature. The picture brings James Cagney and George Raft together in a dramatic and action-filled tale of a hard boiled prisoner and a young reporter who cracks under the severity of prison discipline.

"Hunchback" Continues.

"The Hunchback of Notre Dame" will continue at the Ohio through Thursday. There is considerable interest in the film for those who saw the early version with Lon Chaney years ago, in comparing his work with that of Charles Laughton, who plays the deformed and hideous bell ringer of the cathedral. Laughton's facial make-up is almost terrifying and seems less human than that of Chaney. The picture is impressive from photographic and directorial standpoints.

The Gay Banditti.

The romance that followed the gay Banditti's, popular magazine story of last year, is captured again on the screen in "The Young In Heart," which the Park offers today and Thursday. Janet Gaynor, Douglas Fairbanks, Paulette Goddard and Roland Young are stars of this story of an impoverished family that lived by its wits. Otto Kruger and Phillips Holmes in "Housemaster" is also to be shown.

Orange and lemon trees are being planted on Baldhead Island, North Carolina's unique tropical belt.

TELL BILL GOODBYE + + + + + +

CHAPTER FORTY-TWO

IT WAS too fantastic. Only a few moments before, Fabienne had hoped there would be no one to see her slipping up stairs to look in on Sonny Parsons. Now with him, bundled in blankets, cradled in her arms, she would have given anything in the world to have someone find them. It was, seemingly, a deserted hospital in which they made a strange group.

"You can't take a sick child out into a night as cold as this," Fabienne said, hoping to appeal to Chris' instinct.

"He's not sick any more. The doctor said he was going to discharge him tomorrow. I've dressed him warmly."

The child in Fabienne's arms stirred restlessly. He was hot and uncomfortable. Any moment he would awake. Let him, Fabienne thought wildly. Let him cry out as she could not!

No, she couldn't, because, for all that she was well aware of the wrong in what was being done, Chris' story of persecution and injustice had affected her deeply. Perhaps Christine was not mad. Perhaps there was right in what she was doing. If she believed that Larry would come soon and help her, Fabienne thought, Chris was doing no different than she would have done herself. There are things that are beyond such a law as gave the custody of Chris' child to his father and into the care of a grandfather who wanted to deprive him of his mother's love.

Christine said, "I don't like to say this to you, Fab. You'll have to forgive me for being melodramatic. I—I've got a gun."

She pressed the elevator bell while Fab stared at her, unable to believe her own ears.

"It's in here," Chris said, indicating her pocket, as if she were talking about a handkerchief. "Don't say anything to anyone as we go out."

"But suppose someone asks me where were going?" she said wishing that her brain didn't go completely numb in the face of the first real occasion she'd had for using it.

"I've thought it all out. You say, 'This is the case Dr. Mallory spoke to you about. He was coming to bring the baby to his mother, but he was delayed and sent me to take him with Mrs. Parsons'."

"Chris, I can't. Don't you realize what this means? We can both go to prison—"

"Did you ever hear of a mother going to prison for kidnaping her own child? Chris asked calmly. Indeed it was suddenly a new Chris, not the distraught, shaking girl of the afternoon. She was completely calm, mistress of the situation. It was Fabienne whose teeth were chattering with nervousness when the elevator came up.

Robert wasn't very bright, but he was bright enough to know that there was something irregular about a child being taken from the hospital at that hour. His face showed his struggle to become articulate about it.

Fabienne said, "It's all right, Robert. Dr. Mallory discharged this case today. His mother's only just come for him. We're taking him home."

Out in the cold street, she held the child closer to her.

"My car is up the street," Chris said. "Give him to me now. I'm going to drive him to Boston. Mother's there. She'll put me up."

Fabienne said, "Get in my car. It's the coupe ahead of yours. You can't take a child anywhere in an open car tonight." She had completely given up trying to decide whether this was right or wrong.

Christine got into the car and Fabienne placed the still sleeping child in her arms. She ran around and got in the other side and started the motor.

When it was running but the car not yet in motion, she said, "This is a desperate thing, Chris, and heaven only knows what'll happen to us, but I seem to be in it now."

"Stay on the East Side and take the Bronx River parkway," Chris directed.

"We'll never get to Boston tonight. We're mad! As soon as the nurse discovers Sonny is gone, she'll send for the police and they'll get us before we're out of the state!"

"Drive fast," Chris said, bending lovingly over her child, cradling it hungrily.

Chris met few cars on the road, and when she got on the parkway she opened up, driving sixty miles and more an hour. "Don't you know that your mother's place is the first place they'll look for you?"

"I won't let them find me until Larry gets back. I'll find a way. I won't let you turn back now, Fabienne. If you turn me and Sonny over to the police, I'll kill myself. I don't want to live without Sonny. My life has been hell for two years. This is my chance to save our happiness."

After that, Fabienne fell into deep silence, driving steadily, keeping her eyes on the road, her ear attuned for the sound of a motorcycle.

Christine coughed two or three times and turned the collar of her coat up around her ears.

Fabienne looked at her anxiously, a new fear beginning to tug at her. As if she did not have enough to worry about with a lifetime sentence in prison ahead of her, now there was Chris' health to worry her. Chris' cough was sharp and in the light from the dashboard she could see the bright spots of color on her cheeks.

They had to stop once for gas. "Keep low, and pull the rug over Sonny," she instructed.

"Can you get a glass of water? I'm awfully thirsty," Chris said, and began to cough again.

Fabienne got the water and brought it back to her. When their hands touched, it was like touching burning coal. Christine had a fever.

"Oh, Lord," Fabienne prayed, "I haven't asked much of you. I don't know how to say prayers, but please help me to do SOMETHING! I don't know what to do. Please tell me what to do and I'll do anything You ever ask of me again."

It was the first prayer Fabienne ever had voiced.

And it was immediately answered.

Suddenly she KNEW what to do. It was as clear as if it had been written on the windshield before her, where big white snowflakes were beginning to cling. The storm she had feared was coming.

She turned off on a side road at Stamford.

Instantly, Chris said, "Stay on the parkway."

"No, Chris. I've got a better idea. I know where we can go and be safe. We would not be safe in Boston. We'll be where we're going shortly and you and Sonny can be put to bed and kept warm. No one in the world would ever think of looking for us there."

"Where?" Chris asked, a guarded but alert tone in her voice which had become raspy.

"A friend of mine has a little house he uses in the summertime. It's between Stepney and Newtown."

There wasn't anything else she could do that night, but in the morning she could telephone Bill and have him come out. Bill's broad shoulders could take on bigger burdens than this.

She said no more, devoting herself to difficult driving, leaning her head out of the window to find the road she had traveled but twice. The snow was getting thicker and she could scarcely see the road ahead of her.

For some time she thought that she was lost. Then she saw the big red barns at the corner where the side road and the state road met. Bill's house was half a mile down the side road.

When they got there and she parked the car, she found she could hardly stand. "A fine pair of kidnapers we are," she said, lifting Sonny from Chris' arms. "I hope this snow is over by morning."

Dems Urge Administration to 'Lay Low' on Hot Potato Until After Election.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—In 1940, year of a presidential election, the reciprocal trade agreement program may become a political hot potato.

Within the Democratic party itself looms the possibility of a serious split over one of the major policies of President Roosevelt's administration.

Some Democratic senators privately have urged the administration to postpone demands for renewal of authority to negotiate trade agreements with other nations until 1941 to avoid the possibility of an intraparty struggle prior to the convention and campaign.

House Republicans, under leadership of Representative Martin (R-Mass.) already have organized committees to attack the trade program and Martin predicts the issue will furnish the major legislative fight of the year.

And a high official of the state department declared the administration has every intention of fighting to the bitter end to keep its program intact from threats of killing it, modifying it or abrogating agreements negotiated under the act which expires on June 12, 1940.

Secretaries Hull and Wallace, repeatedly have defended the program under which the President has authority to reduce tariffs 50 per cent.

Hull contends the only alternative to the trade program "means, within nations, increasing regimentation in all phases of economic life, beginning with the surplus-producing industries and steadily extending to all other branches of production and distribution."

Plan to Give Congress Budget Supervision Wins Backing

PROPOSAL TO SET UP AGENCY GETS SUPPORT

Two Members Draft Bills to Give Lawmakers Permanent Check on Policies.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — Strong backing for permanent congressional supervision of the nation's budget developed today in the senate.

Two members drafted bills setting up a permanent congressional budget agency.

Dividing over the method to be employed, influential leaders of both parties rallied to urge machinery giving the legislative branch a powerful voice in moulding fiscal policies. Under the present system the executive branch drafts the budget and congress gets a peek at it only after completion. Then the witnesses heard by the congressional appropriations committees all represent the departments or agencies seeking funds.

An International News survey disclosed nearly a dozen senators behind a move for passage of legislation setting up machinery to help draft a "legislative budget" and to comprehensively examine into the regular budget before congress starts work on it.

Democratic Leader Barkley of Kentucky said he would support it, adding:

"Such an agency or joint committee would be very reassuring to business in my opinion. A lot of senators have expressed favor of the idea to me. I would support such a plan."

One outstanding Democratic leader privately revealed he had talked the idea over with President Roosevelt and said that the president thought it might be a good thing.

Backing the proposition were Barkley and Senators Adams of Colorado, King of Utah, Russell of Georgia, Byrd of Virginia and Bailey of North Carolina, Democrats, Senator Austin of Vermont, assistant Republican leader, Senator Nye, Republican, North Dakota, and Senator Taft, Republican, Ohio.

Legislation Drafted.

King has already drafted legislation, providing for a "congressional agency on appropriations," and said he will discuss it Wednesday in the senate and formally introduce it later. Adams said he was considering introduction of a measure which would set up a staff of experts permanently employed, to go into every detail of the budget, study its adequacy, look for possible reductions and report to congress.

"Some sort of agency like that should save the government money," observed Byrd, "although I personally would favor establishment of a permanent joint committee of the congress to do the work, with the aid of a staff of experts."

Austin said: "I favor the expert staff method, and I would support such a proposal."

Taft added: "I would support either a joint committee or an agency of experts to study fiscal needs. We are badly in need of some such agency."

NLRB Goes Into Court to 'Sign Up' Ford

Up and Down THE STREET

Members of the newly created traffic committee would certainly deny that they had "arranged" for all of the auto accidents that appeared on police records this morning, but anyway they were nicely timed as the committee meets with the finance committee tonight to ask for more officers for a traffic squad. Eleven crashes were reported over the 24-hour period ending this morning, with damages to fenders, and radiator grills. There were only seven reports on yesterday's first shift but every one of them was a motor crash. It is this sort of thing that the traffic committee hopes to remedy.

Police today were wondering what they were going to do with a quantity of food, clothing and tools that they have stacked in the radio room at police headquarters. The assortment, including a wide variety of canned goods, a chest of carpenter tools some laundry and a bundle of cloths was found yesterday by a railroad employe hidden behind the Baltimore and Ohio freight house on North Walnut street.

Christmas is over for another year, but S. K. Jorgensen, director of orchestra music in the public schools, is still looking for presents. He wants a Santa Claus to furnish various elementary and junior high school orchestras with violins for students who want to start taking lessons, but who are unable to buy their own. According to Jorgensen about 15 violins are needed. Anyone having a violin no longer in use, and who would care to donate it to one of the schools for the rest of the year, is asked to contact Jorgensen at Senior high school.

There's nothing new in tourists taking pets with them on trips, but there's something definitely original in taking the pet goldfish for a trip. When a Massachusetts car parked in front of the Mansfield Leland hotel this morning, the driver came out of the hotel carrying a glass tank holding a small amount of water, small rocks and water plants. Darting around in the tank were several goldfish. The tank was turned over to the woman in the car who placed it tenderly on the floor back of the front seat. And she talked baby talk to the "ittie bittie fishie," so help us.

SHOWS 533 IN JAIL DURING '39

Sheriff's Report Reveals 34 More Served Time Last Year; Fewer Serve Out Fines.

Crime was either on the increase in Richland county last year or officials did a better job of enforcement.

Thirty-five more prisoners were housed at the county jail in 1939 than in the preceding year with 533 serving terms or held for brief periods in the jail last year, Sheriff E. P. Long's report shows.

Improving economic conditions were reflected even in the jail population. Fewer prisoners served out fines last year, the sheriff said, indicating that more had the money to pay out.

Sheriff Long and his five deputies traveled more than the distance around the world in 1939 to take prisoners and insane persons to institutions and to return prisoners to Mansfield from other states to face trial.

The officers traveled 18,790 miles in 104 trips to state institutions with prisoners and added about 8,000 miles in eight trips out of Ohio for a total of 26,790 miles. The longest trip was to Los Angeles, Calif. A trip was made to Springfield, Mo., three to Indiana points, one to Illinois and two to Michigan.

While he had no figures available, the sheriff estimated that he and his officers traveled close to 50,000 miles during the year on short trips in the county.

TELLS FOREMEN PLANT SAFETY FORMS BIG PART OF THEIR JOB

About 150 members of the Mansfield-Shelby Foremen's club heard about safety in industry last night from Michael P. "Mike" Grady of Canton, safety foreman for the Pennsylvania railroad in eastern Ohio for a number of years.

Grady, a big Irishman who doesn't mince words, talked on "A Foreman's Viewpoint on Safety" at the club's monthly dinner meeting at the Mansfield-Leland hotel

"It's a law of God not to defraud a man of his hire, but that doesn't mean just not beating him out of his paycheck. You can do a better job of defrauding him by not giving him a safe, clean place to work," Grady said.

"I believe in discipline for violation of safety rules by industrial workers, but from a sympathetic viewpoint and for their own good."

Citing the progress that has been made in safety programs in industry, Grady said, "They laughed at safety advocates 40 years ago just as they did at the inventor of the telephone because they thought then that industry had to give her sacrifice in maimed and crippled workers.

"Now things are different, and safety rules play a big part in the protection of workers to prevent the loss of eyes, arms, and legs."

Advising foremen on how to do better work, he said personality, poise, and tact are essentials of the good industrial boss.

"Personality is that 'you' in the foreman, poise is the way he acts, and tact is the way he decides," Grady said.

"Your job isn't complete unless you investigate the unusual things that occur in the day's work. Don't let little mysteries go unsolved, study your men, understand them, and teach them."

Harry Sain, a member of the Ohio Industrial commission, was introduced by Jay S. Cairns, club president, who was in charge of the meeting.

Msgr. R. C. Goebel, director of St. Peter's Catholic church, gave the invocation.

BATTLE SEEN HEADING FOR FINAL RULING

Labor Board Requests Federal Jurist to Enforce Its Orders.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — Setting the stage for a possible supreme court test, the National Labor Relations board went into the Federal appellate court today to "sign up" one of the world's biggest employers—Henry Ford

Specifically, the board announced it had filed a petition with the circuit court of appeals in Cincinnati asking the court to enforce its order against the Ford Motor company in its vast, main plant employing upwards of 90,000 in Dearborn, Mich. The NLRB asked the court to approve an order directing the company to:

1. Stop discouraging membership in the CIO's United Automobile Workers union.

2. Reinstate 22 workers allegedly discharged for union activities.

Either side can institute Supreme court action after the Appellate court makes a finding, and it was believed the case was headed for the high court.

A great part of the board's complaint centers around activities of the aged auto magnate. Ford once said in an interview that "I have always made a better bargain for our men than an outsider could . . . We have never had to bargain against our men and we don't expect to begin now."

Cites Fear of Strike.

In another part of his petition, the board held that the riot at the Ford main plant May 26, 1937 constituted unfair labor practices. The company in reply said it feared a sit-down strike and in attacking union organizers who attempted to distribute handbills then was merely exercising its right to protect its property against trespass

The NLRB called the Ford defense a "sham," in its petition, and speaking of the riot, went on to allege that it was "a brutal object lesson to intimidate not merely the eight union employes who participated in the distribution but also of all the company's employes."

Most of the complaint, however, centered around statements made by Ford in a newspaper interview shortly after the riot. The board alleged that the statements were reprinted in pamphlet form and distributed to Ford workers by the company. The company claimed that the board in holding that an unfair labor practice was infringing on the right of Ford to freedom of speech.

Recommended for reappointment at Loudonville was Postmaster William A. Cowen who has held the post for six and a half years, succeeding the late Gail Case.

FAIR ENOUGH!

Youth Movements In U. S. Seen as Selfish Groups Dominated By Oldsters

—By WESTBROOK PEGLER

NEW YORK—The common bond between all the youth movements which have cause such commotion since last summer is that none of them emphasize character and the obligation of the individual human being to behave decently.

This will be denied with great resentment on behalf of those youth movements which are directed by the clergy, but I insist that even in those groups the purpose is not primarily to refine the individual. The purpose is to unite a lot of young people against other young people who are also being united by their elders for conflicting aims.

None of these youth movements, from the Boy Scouts on up through the grades to Ham-'n-Eggs and Townsendism, is a spontaneous or independent action. In the background of every youth movement in Europe and in this country you will find shrewd elders guiding and greatly enjoying the precocious antics of the little dears.

Up in the Ham-'n-Eggs and Townsend age brackets the political engineers are less modest. In the Cleveland convention of the old folks' party in 1936 old Doc Townsend was on the platform and all over the place, and the old gentleman did manage to hang onto his show.

Charlie Coughlin yanked off his coat and collar and gave the old folks what-for, and reverend carpetbagger from Louisiana, who had lost out when Huey Long was shot, busted into the convention and tried his darndest to take over. So the old doctor still holds the nominal leadership of the Townsend thing, but you may have noticed that the old people have been exploited in the most shameless manner by candidates for the Senate and Congress who are much below the pension age.

They get elected on the Townsend vote, and then nothing happens nor will it ever.

Perhaps I shouldn't have mentioned the Boy Scouts as a youth movement because they are too young to matter, and, anyway, so far as I know, they are not exploited. However, they aren't independent and that is one of the points I am making.

I still think youth will continue to get the best advice and direction at home, and that if the American family can't produce anything better than a lot of ignoramuses, cads and grafters then it is just too bad for the U. S. A.

Any person who presumes to become a patron of American youth, thereby posing as an expert in the development of the moral character of young people, had better come with good credentials. Any man or woman who has done a conspicuously unsuccessful job in this respect is likely to raise a challenge from the parents of on-coming youth and from thoughtful young people, too.

Around this country, in Louisiana, New Jersey, Chicago, Kansas City, Los Angeles, Boston and New York, the character of the men and women who hold public office and political power is such as to cast sad doubt on the character and the fundamental honesty of the people and the future of the country. In none of these new youth movements, however, is there any inspiration to better conduct. They all seem very hard-boiled, power-hungry and demanding.

The rascals now in their middle years or early old age who have robbed the public kitty and weakened faith in popular government in the political bad lands of the country cannot claim to have had bad raising or no religious teaching. They got that, all right, but it didn't take. They didn't get character. I don't know why, but youth movements are not the answer.

Hollywood Speaks---

—By ROBBIN COONS

By FLORENCE RYERSON AND COLIN CLEMENTS

(The popular fiction and screen team plunge into what they call a "stream of unconsciousness"—for Robbin Coons, on vacation.)

HOLLYWOOD—Now there's no use getting panicky. I guess if Coons can do it every day I can do it once.

Do what? Write a column. But what do you write? Why did I get into this, anyway?

You know darned well why. Because you never learned to say the word no. That's why. One little two-letter word, and you couldn't learn it. I suppose they cut it out of the dictionary you used in school. If you'd learned it you'd still have that lawn-mower . . . and about $500. And you wouldn't have been dragged into that talk on gladioli, their past and future, at the Peter Pan club . . .

This isn't getting me anywhere. I'm hysterical, that's what. Hysterical. I've got to concentrate. I've got to think what would interest people who read columns. What do people who read columns look like, anyway? Stop that. Stop that at once! You're only making things worse.

I wonder . . . would they be interested in rural stuff? Little stories about the ranch? . . . No. Nobody's interested in a ranch unless he owns one, and then he wants to talk about the blue ribbons he won on his cauliflowers instead of listening to what the cutworms did to your cabbages. Awful bores, people who own ranches.

Would they be interested in animals? What's interesting about having three dogs, six cats, a cow, a horse, and two monkeys? Anybody can have three dogs, six cats, a cow, a horse and two monkeys. Anybody who's crazy enough. And if you tell the story about putting up the box for pigeons and raising seven hoot-owls again, you won't have a friend left in the world. Probably you haven't a friend left anyway.

Maybe I could give a little good advice to young writers. They're always sending letters, asking how to write novels, and plays, and scenarios. Yeah, and you're always telling 'em. But who wants to work, when it's easier to just sit down and write, like Saroyan?

How about doing a little business in the Who's Who line? Tossing in big names, casually, like dog meat. That always seems to get over. 'As Greta said to me at lunch only last week—" or "As I told dear old Hughie. I always call Walpole 'Hughie'—because he doesn't wear a mustache, you know."

No. That won't work. You've got to have practice for that.

Speaking of time, how much longer have I? Ten minutes? Now I know just how the doomed man feels when he hears the firing squad marching down the hall. But all he has to face is death. I've got to face Coons.

Who does this Coons guy think he is, anyway?

Where does he get the idea he rates a vacation?

What work does he do just sitting at a typewriter and clicking out a column—one little, short column—a day?

Oh, he's on the phone, is he? Well, you just tell him I'm out. I've gone on vacation. I'm counting on him as guest-novelist to write our next book . . . and it had better be good!

'Hustle . . . Stop Quitting.' —Barrow.

NEW YORK—(U.P.)—Ed Barrow, president of the New York Yankees, is getting quite bored listening to other clubs concede the Yanks the American league pennant months before the season opens, and today offered a few tips as to how they might make a better race of it. "If they'd get out and do a little hustling and stop quitting before the race starts, they might get some place."

Bobcats Lead Pace in Ohio Collegiate Race

IN THE RUHL BOOK

By OSCAR RUHL,
News-Journal Sports Editor.

YESTERDAY'S announcement that Dewey Stover will return as manager of the Mansfield Braves pleased the baseball-goers.

Stover made a host of friends when he piloted the Red Sox to the Ohio State league pennant in 1937. He managed the Moultrie, Ga., entry in the Georgia-Florida league the following year, and returned to Mansfield after the start of the season last year to replace Ray French.

The popular Stover failed to pull any miracles with the Braves, but he did well enough to earn another chance in Mansfield, despite the fact that his team finished in the cellar.

Stover may not win the pennant next season, but, with him at the helm at the start of the campaign, Mansfield can be assured of a hustling baseball club.

While getting up into the years, Stover plans to be a playing-manager, and he expects to be able to play a full schedule again this year.

If he can continue to play the kind of ball he presented last season when he smacked the ball well over .300, the veteran Stover will give the Braves a big punch at the plate, and every little bit will help next season if a man cannot be obtained to replace the hard-hitting Hank Edwards, who led the circuit at the plate in 1939.

Stover conferred with Mansfield officials last Sunday, signed his contract and admitted that he couldn't wait until the curtain was rung up.

How many of last year's team will return is a question, but it is likely that the training camp will be opened in Mansfield early in April.

The colored boys would do the dribbling, the Jewish fellows would shoot the baskets and the Irishman would take the ball off the opponents' banking board."

Conn's Next In Line For Louis Bout.

THEY HAVE mapped out Billy Conn's future to the point where if he can win just about two more fights, beginning Wednesday night, the light-heavy division will lose its champion via abdication. Conn will meet Henry Cooper, Brooklyn heavyweight, in a 12-round bout, and if he wins as expected, he will be line for a tussle with Johnny Paycheck. Victories in these two bouts will just about qualify Conn for a crack at Joe Louis . . . and then it's up to Conn.

Bushnell Five Rips Prospect For Eighth Win

Keeps Grade School League Record Intact With 38 to 12 Triumph.

The defeat suffered by Bushnell in the tournament staged at the Y. M. C. A. last week didn't effect the club's play as it swamped Prospect, 38 to 12, at Senior high yesterday to register its eighth straight Grade School league victory.

Bowman, which handed Bushnell the lone beating, and Carpenter still shared the runner-up post by registering wins. Bowman stopped Western, 28 to 12, and Carpenter edged Newman, 12 to 11.

Brinkerhoff defeated West Fifth, 15 to 9, and Hedges halted Woodland, 16 to 7, in the other contests.

Bob Jones, the league's leading individual scorer, kept up his torrid pace by slipping in 24 points for Bushnell. Scott, a teammate, added 12 markers.

CLOSING with a 233, Bill Donnellan hit the 626 figures to account for the only 600 bowled at the Meder alleys last night. Performing with the Liederkranz club of the Club league, Donnellan started out with a 202 and compiled a 191 in the middle game. He led the Liederkranz club to a high 2760, but, due to a big handicap, lost two games to the Page Dairys.

Kern of Tech Scans 'Help Wanted' Column.

PITTSBURGH—(U.P.)—Another football coaching casualty, Bill Kern of Carnegie Tech, scanned the college "help wanted" column today, and he was reported considering the vacancy at the University of West Virginia.

Kern's resignation was announced last night. It confirmed rumors that began in mid-season, Kern's third here since playing and coaching under Jock Sutherland at Pitt. He brought the eastern championship to Tech last year and took his team to the Sugar Bowl to lose to TCU. Kern had been reported dissatisfied with the failure of the student scholarship fund, set up to help athletes at Tech, to produce.

WHITE SOX PIN HOPES ON ROOKIE SECOND SACKER

CHICAGO—(INS)—The Chicago White Sox' hopes for efficient operation around second base next year were pinned today on a 22-year-old rookie, Don Kolloway, who played one year with Oklahoma City and batted .302.

Obtained from Oklahoma City for Catcher Tony Rensa, Infielder Jesse Landrum and some cash, Kolloway may get the biggest rookie assignment in the game next year. He is 6 feet tall, and weighs 180 pounds. The White Sox yesterday sent Catcher Norman Schleuter to St. Paul.

Little's Rally Wins On Coast

Shoots Sparkling 65 to Win Los Angeles Open.

LOS ANGELES—(INS)—W. Lawson Little, former Stanford university golfer, long reckoned the greatest match play competitor in the world, today loomed as the "hottest thing" in money golf in California following his electrifying victory in the fifteenth annual $5,000 Los Angeles open tournament.

Far off the pace as the final round started, Little burned up the water soaked fairways with a last round 65—a course record which brother professionals claimed to be unique in competitive golf.

* * *

By virtue of this 65, Little, who had started five strokes behind the third round leader, Clayton Heafner of Linville, N. C., overtook the latter, passed him and finished with a 72 hole total of 282 to Heafner's 283. Little won $1,500, Heafner $900 and Olin Dutra, who finished third, $700. Jimmy Hines, 4th, won $500.

TONY PENNA WINS $218 FOR FIFTH PLACE TIE

LOS ANGELES — (AP) — The pockets of Tony Penna, Dayton, O., golfer, bulged today with $218—his winnings in the Los Angeles open tournament. Penna tied with four other finishers for fifth place with 290. Lawson Little's 282 won top money of $1,500.

Toledo Loses Second

Rockets' Defeat by Marshall Leaves Ohio U. With Best Record in State.

(By Associated Press)

OHIO University's Bobcats led the pack in Ohio's basketball race today as Toledo absorbed its second defeat in 14 starts to drop into second place with a .857 rating. The Athens lads have won seven and lost one for .875.

The Rockets, beaten in early season by Princeton, fell before the thundering herd of Marshall college, 50 to 37, last night.

Toledo started fast, but Marshall rallied late in the first half to take a 22 to 20 edge at intermission. The Ohioans failed to cut the margin in the late periods despite crack shooting by Center Bob Gerber, with 13 points, and Forward Pat Hintz, with 11.

Two other Ohio teams fared badly on foreign soil, State losing to Purdue, 49 to 32, and Youngstown taking its second defeat of the year at Canton, N. Y., against St. Lawrence, 47 to 37. The Penguins have won five games.

Boilermakers Trim Ohio Decisively.

THE Big Ten basketball chase is only four days old, but seven teams, including Ohio State, already have lost at least one game in the titular battle.

The three teams still unbeaten in conference play are Indiana, the favored five, Michigan and Purdue. The Boilermakers have been most impressive in whipping Northwestern and Ohio State, the defending champion, decisively.

Purdue amassed 89 points on these two teams and allowed them only 61, coasting to a 49 to 32 victory over the Buckeyes last night. Speed and smooth teamwork contributed largely to the wide margin of their superiority. Purdue led at the half, 25 to 20.

* * *

Indiana swept Iowa aside, 45 to 30. Bill Menke pacing the attack with 11 points. Michigan kept step with the two Indiana teams by outlasting a stubborn Wisconsin five, 44 to 39. Northwestern bounced back from its opening round defeat by Purdue to whip Minnesota, 46 to 38. Illinois, victim of Indiana Saturday, barely nosed out Chicago, 34 to 33, on Little Joe Frank's last-minute field goal.

Piece of 'Soap' Brings Kasoboski Defeat in Top Bout at Armory

AN alleged piece of soap—that's what the pallid fops claimed it was—proved more valuable to Kimon Kudo at the armory last night than his famous arm strangle.

Suppose You Lived In Germany

Fritz Leads Colorful War Life--- Even Food Cards Are Vari-Hued

Second of Three stories on what's happened to Mr. Average Man in countries at war.

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER
(AP Staff Correspondent)

BERLIN—Life in embattled Germany presents itself to the average civilian in colors of the rainbow.

The citizen ventures out at night, sober; then, bang, he strikes a lamp post in darkened street. First lesson in color: Forehead, next morning, is black and blue, and possibly green.

Wisened by that experience, he buys a pocket lamp if he can find a shop that still has them,* and inserts a piece of blue or red paper over the bulb so as not to throw too much light. If he cannot get a flashlight, he buys an old-fashioned barn lantern, with red, green or blue glass. The colors grow.

Button, Button.

Also, he buys a phosphorescent button for his lapel. That is to signal to fellow pedestrians, "Look out! Don't bump into me!" If he's of a fanciful mind, he buys a tomcat, a monkey or some other little pet carved out of the phosphorescent material. If he's a cavalier, he presents his lady with phosphorescent rose, lily or forget-met-not.

Next morning, color life starts all over. The male of the species makes sure that he has his yellow certificate, entitling him to purchase five liters, (about five quarts) of gasoline per coupon. He also makes sure he takes his red bread card, his blue meat card, and his pink card for staples like rice, macaroni, lentils, etc., with him to present at his favorite restaurant.

The choice of dishes is made rapidly. On two days of the week, no meat is to be had And on other days no restaurant can offer more than half a dozen choices of main dishes.

Meanwhile, the gentleman's faithful spouse has spent about half an hour putting away all signs of last night's black-out.

Foods by Colors.

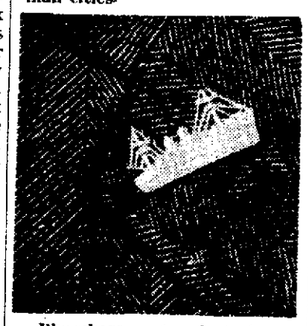
Next she starts her daily shopping. To the red, blue and pink cards of the sort her husband has taken, she adds a white card for marmalade and sugar, a yellow card for fats, margarine and oil, and a brown card for soap. Not that she will be able to get all the articles she wants; her tradesman may shrug and say, "Sorry, madam, but our new contingent hasn't come as yet."

The color scheme is continued by other citizens standing in line with her. There's the choleric wife of the dentist next door; her face turns purple as she cusses the war and wishes it were over. There's the young postman's wife; she turns red with anger because the butcher can't supply her. Her husband has been transferred from Poland to the western front, and she wants so badly to have a nice chop for Fritz during his one-day furlough.

Meanwhile the man of the house has reached his office. He tells his secretary to go out and buy some badly-needed towels. "Nothing doing," the fraulein says, I haven't any. Bezugsschein."

Another of his peeves! To obtain a "Bezugsschein" for towels, he must convince a hard-boiled official that the old towel is absolutely unusable.

White garments help pick out traffic cops in blacked-out German cities.



Phosphorescent gadgets in lapels, like this, are the vogue among Germans who move in darkened streets.

And no matter how shapely a lady's leg may be, if she has one change of stockings, officials may refuse her authorization to buy a new pair.

This writer knows of a man who asked for a "Bezugsschein"

As in all warring countries, cartoons like this one from Kladderdatsch help keep up spirit behind the front. Called "Rest, Britannia, Under the Waves," it's a comment on German success in the war at sea.

for a business suit. The official asked if he had any other suits. "Only the one I have on today," was the answer. The man thought the official was concerned about his every-day clothes.

"Please take a seat in the anteroom," he was told.

After half an hour he was called in again. On a hall-tree were his tuxedo and his dark, Sunday suit.

"Are these yours?" he was asked.

To his affirmative reply, the official said, "Very well, here is your 'Bezugsschen' for a new suit of clothes. But you will donate these other two suits to the Winter Relief. You understand?"

Of course the man understood. these two suits were of good wool; the certificate entitled him to a modern suit made of wood-fibre mixed somewhat with wool. In short, life for the civilian in Germany is slightly complicated.

But six years of Nazi discipline have made the average German patriotic and meek. He may grumble about the war, but he bears it patiently.

TOMORROW: FRANCE

Nazis Still Have Places To Go

Food and commodities are rationed, newspaper headlines talk about conflict and cities have blackouts every night, but, unless a citizen is drafted for the army or the labor corps, Germans don't feel the war so much. For example:

Construction of public buildings and Hitler's super automobile highways continues.

Theaters, concerts and cinemas continue as in peace times. Movie attendance has even increased over last year.

Spas are operating as usual—Karlsbad, Marienbad, Bad Nauheim and several other famous ones are ready to receive patients.

Sports are being operated as near to a peacetime scale as possible; international soccer matches are played with neutral teams, in Germany and abroad, and professional boxing matches have been arranged for big cities this winter.

The Leipzig Fair, authorities have announced, will be held "under all circumstances" March 3-8, 1940.

SURREALISM IN SOAP

COLUMBIA, S C (AP) Soap carving was being studied in a grade school class, but one youngster was unable to chip off flakes to form any animal. Discouraged over his low grades, he turned in a plain bar of soap "I'm a modern and this is an example of surrealism" he told the teacher. His grade was 100.

BUYING APATHY HITS STOCKS IN SLOW TRADING

Leaders Shift Over Narrow Range; Steel Shares in Slight Improvement.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK — Stocks encountered further buying apathy in today's market and leaders shifted over a narrow range.

The pace was sluggish from the opening gong on and, near the second hour, there were about as many fractional losses as gains.

Attracting a little support were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Republic Steel, Anaconda and Kennecott.

Holding back were DuPont, Eastman, General Electric, Goodyear, Chrysler, General Motors, Montgomery Ward and Sears Roebuck.

Bonds were quiet and selectively higher. Commodities were mixed and European securities market without definite trends.

Trading came almost to a standstill as boardrooms tuned in on Prime Minister Chamberlain's speech.

Loans Show Drop.

Noted by market followers was the condition statement of federal reserve member banks in 101 cities for the week ending Jan. 3, disclosing a drop of $47,000,000 in commercial, industrial and agricultural loans, said to have been due party to the New Year holiday.

Indications of some letdown in the economic upswing were seen in reports from the machine and tool field that domestic purchasing here has declined substantially in the past few weeks. New orders for tools were understood to be running at about the same level as shipments with backlogs.

ACTS TO STOP SALE OF FISK

Share Owner in Rubber Company Seeks Court Injunction.

BOSTON — (AP) — An order to halt the sale of the Fisk Rubber company to the United States Rubber company was sought in a petition on file today in superior court.

Anthony P. Massare, of Arlington, who said he owned 100 shares of common stock in the Fisk company, contended that U. S. Rubber's offer of $11,000,000 failed to take into consideration Fisk's goodwill, patents and trademarks.

He also asked an order voiding an agreement between the two corporations and appointment of a master to appraise the assets of Fisk.

20,000 More Trapped Reds Face Annihilation By Finns

SKIING TROOPS HEM RUSSIANS NEAR FRONTIER

Third Division Expected to Be 'Cut to Pieces' Soon by Defenders' Leaders.

(By International News Service)

HELSINKI — Finland's canny warriors spun a military spider's web around still another Russian division along the eastern frontier today, laying groundwork for what may prove a third mass "annihilation" of bewildered Red army troops.

Reports from the battle front stated a third Russian division already is "sitting in a trap" and that Finnish authorities expect it to be cut to pieces at "any moment."

These optimistic reports brought new jubilation to Helsinki following word that the Red Army's 44th division had suffered the same bloody fate as that handed out nearly two weeks ago to the Soviet 163rd division by Finland's hardy ski troops.

If the new victory is attained on schedule, it will mean that the Finns will have won three major battles with almost clock-like precision.

The Russians caught in the new trap were said to number 20,000 men, situated northeast of Salla. If they are wiped out with the decisiveness with which the two other divisions were "annihilated," they will bring the number of Russian losses to some 120,000 troops since hostilities began nearly six weeks ago.

20,000 Lost Lives.

The 44th Red division was "destroyed" on the Suomussalmi front with a loss unofficially estimated at nearly 20,000 men. The battle represented Finland's second major victory of the war.

Finnish troops, many of them the best ski fighters in the land, closed in on the Russians between Suomussalmi and Raate, climaxing a six-day fight by erasing the entire division.

Meanwhile, the Russian offensive on the Carelian front appeared to be slowing down, presumably owing to transport difficulties. It also was reported that the Russians were suffering from a serious food shortage and that the population of Leningrad was rebelling again.

Advices from the eastern border said that at least 12 crashes occurred last week on the Soviet Leningrad-Murmansk railway. They were caused by Finnish raiders who tore up the rails and rendered the line virtually useless for transporting large quantities of military supplies.

Mills Becomes New Assistant Sales Manager; Beatty to Succeed Him.

Promotion of Reese Mills to assistant sales manager of the merchandising division of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company was announced today by Frank R. Kohnstamm, manager.

Mills replaces Raymond C. Cosgrove who resigned recently to accept the position of vice president and general manager of the manufacturing division of the Crosley Corp., Cincinnati.

In his new position, Mills who for 15 years has been manager of the Westinghouse range and water heater department, will be responsible for co-ordination of the merchandising division's sales activities. The appointment is effective immediately.

Kohnstamm also announced the appointment of R. M. Beatty, sales development manager of the range and water heater department since June, 1937, to succeed Mills as manager of that department.

Mills, a native of Tunnel Hill, Ga., graduated from Georgia Tech and spent one year in the United States army, with the rank of second lieutenant in the field artillery. After the World war, he started with the Westinghouse company in February 1919, and spent a year in the students' course offered by the company.

He worked in various departments and in March, 1920, came to Mansfield, starting as an order clerk, and later entering the sales end of the business.

He soon became interested in working with electric ranges and rose to the managership of the range and water heater department in 1925. In his new capacity he will continue to make his headquarters at Mansfield.

Beatty, a graduate of the University of Wisconsin spent four years in various phases of the range and refrigerator business manufacturing, wholesale and retail, before joining Westinghouse in 1930.

His first post on was as sales education supervisor of the refrigerator department. He later became sales promotion manager of the newly created district with headquarters in Chicago, and in June, 1937, he came to Mansfield as sales department manager of the range and water heater department. He also will continue to maintain his headquarters in Mansfield.

tem, $5,000, and other repairs $12,500.

In urging construction of a new hospital—recommended for the past several years, Glattke's report showed the extent of hospital activities for the past year.

He said that 91,061 inmates received examinations, that surgeons performed 33 major operations and 43,656 minor operations and administered 38,662 dressings.

It also disclosed that during the year 1,334 inmates were admitted to the hospital, that there were 13,122 cases of dental work and 5,353 visual examinations.

Glattke's report showed that on Jan. 1 the population at the institution was 2,818, a decrease of eight per cent from the 3,066 on the same date a year ago.

The report also showed a 30 per cent increase in the number of paroles granted in 1939 by the pardon and parole commission. There were 1,544 inmates paroled, the highest since 1932 when 1,799 were released.

During the year, 82 fugitives were returned to the institution, 19 more than had fled among the 1,545 trusties engaged in employment outside the prison walls on their honor.

Figures showed 1,166 commitments last year as compared with 1,415 for the year previous. Eighty-three prisoners were transferred to the Ohio penitentiary when found to be second offenders.

Only prisoners between the ages of 16 and 30 who are first offenders are received at the institution.

Although prisoners were sentenced to the reformatory for 76 separate offenses, robbery headed the list with 767 committed on this charge. Others of the eight crimes which sent 80 per cent of the prisoners to the institution were assault to rob, grand larceny burglary, burglary and larceny, breaking and entering, auto theft, and operating a motor vehicle without the owner's consent.

Seven counties contributed 55 per cent of the prisoners admitted during the year, the report shows, while four counties had no commitments.

Cuyahoga county, the state's most populous county headed the list sending 262 young men. Others high on the list were Franklin county, 108; Hamilton, 95; Lucas, 54; Stark, 41; Montgomery, 38; Mahoning, 32.

Counties which had no commitments were Brown, Putnam, Vinton, and Williams.

Of the 1,166 prisoners admitted last year, 65 per cent were native Ohioans and only one per cent were foreign born; 70 per cent were white and only 20 per cent had any previous criminal record; 80 per cent were single men and 95 per cent had some religious affiliation.

Accused Child Molester Will Go on Trial Thursday as Result of Decision.

Found sane by two of three examining physicians, George Call, 30, indicted on three counts as a child molester, will go on trial Thursday morning in common pleas court on charges of rape and attempted rape, Prosecutor G. W. Marriott said today.

Call, a former Sharon township WPA worker, was given tests yesterday afternoon and this morning at the county jail. At noon today the physicians returned their divided verdict.

Dr. W. A. Smith and Charles G. Brown said he is sane and Dr. B. E. Shreffler held out for an insanity verdict.

CHAMBERLAIN'S DEFENSE FOR OUSTER HEARD

Prime Minister Says He'll Continue to Do What He Thinks Best in War.

the government it is the fault of the government "because the people have not been told enough."

"We've got to do without a lot of things we shall miss very much," he said. "We are making preparation (to fight on land) when the moment comes."

Imports to Be Cut.

The prime minister said Britain "also must curtail importation of goods not necessary for prosecution of the war in order to leave foreign exchange and shipping space free for purchase and transport of those things we cannot do without."

The prime minister's speech was the beginning of a campaign of speeches by government members to rally the nation behind the war program

Chamberlain began by thanking the people for their consideration in view of the "exhausting burden" of a prime minister in war time.

Chamberlain said that once more men from all parts of the empire had "come here to take their place" by the side of Britons to fight the war—a sacrifice that only the "constant aggression" of Germany could have caused them to make.

"The results of the first four months I think we shall find are not unsatisfactory. The oceans of the world have been swept clear of German shipping.

"The German fleet, at the beginning of the war less than a quarter of our own, has lost by capture, sinking and above all by scuttling, 228,000 tons. And the rest of it is bottled up or consigned to the Baltic.

Cites Bigger Target.

"We present a more extensive target. If we subtract from our losses by enemy action, our gains . . we have lost up to date 122,000 tons.

"That is less than one per cent of the merchant fleet . . . and every day now there are passing upon the oceans no less than 11 million tons of British shipping.

We lost two large warships, the Royal Oak and Courageous, and a certain number of smaller ships. But we have also lost a number of valuable lives in the royal navy . . .

"Our command of the seas is unimpaired."

Chamberlain then referred to the fate of the German Graf Spee as "one of the finest naval actions in all history" and said that the result inflicted "irreparable damage on German military prestige throughout the world."

He emphasized that Britain's sea power was producing the greatest difficulties for German armies and for her efforts to carry on the war.

". . . Finland today is fighting against the forces of unscrupulous violence, as we are ourselves.

"She is fighting for the same things . . . liberty and justice—and her marvelous successes fill us with admiration for her heroism."

DEMS HINT AT DRAFTING PLAN

Central Ohio Party Leaders Talk of Harmony at Jackson Day Fete.

"I would like to see this accomplisher regardless of the ambitions or wishes of any individual," declared Sawyer, who was defeated by Republican John W. Bricker for the governorship in 1938.

"I haven't promised anybody I would or would not be a candidate," he said, "but I do promise I will not enter into any primary fight for the purpose of beating someone else."

Sawyer devoted much of his talk to challenging Bricker's economy claims and criticizing his relief policies.

Arthur Limbach, Democratic state chairman, asserted there was "no disharmony in the party in Ohio."

His observation followed an ex-Gov. Martin L. Davey-Sawyer handshaking pose for news cameramen.

Banquet guests introduced by Limbach included two avowed candidates for the gubernatorial nomination, Herbert S. Duffy, former attorney general, and William J. Kennedy, former secretary of state. Another guest was Charles West, former undersecretary of the interior.

At the speakers' table were two former Democratic state chairmen, Henry Brunner of Mansfield and Francis Poulson, whose proposal for a pre-primary convention to endorse candidates found little support.

NEW LEAGUE OF WOMEN VOTERS ORGANIZES HERE, PICKS OFFICERS

The Mansfield League of Women Voters became a reality last night when by-laws were adopted and officers elected at a meeting held at the Chamber of Commerce rooms.

Mrs. Kathryne Bancroft, Mansfield school teacher, was elected president. Other officers named are Mrs. Alan Tappan, first vice president; Mrs. Louis Bromfield, second vice president; Mrs. Benjamin Esgar, secretary; and Mrs. A. M. Colby, treasurer.

Mrs. Frederick Grover, Oberlin, a district representative, met with the Mansfield group last night and remained over today to assist in setting up committees which function under the non-partisan organization.

The official title of "Mansfield League of Women Voters" was adopted by the group, with the bi-laws providing for the membership of any woman in Mansfield or Richland county.

It was decided to hold the regular meetings on the first Tuesday of each month. The next meeting has been set for Feb. 6, at the Chamber of Commerce room.

Several from the Mansfield League will go to Dayton on Jan. 16 to attend the state meeting at the Miami hotel at which federal and state administrators will be guest speakers.

The charter membership roster has not been completed and will not be closed for several weeks.

Mrs. F. David Boals, served as temporary chairman at the organization meeting.

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, TUESDAY, JANUARY 9, 1940.

When you hear of a girl "making a fool of a man" you can be quite sure he had already made the start.

Hearing that Russian invaders do not like the extreme cold, those accommodating Finns are making it hot for them.

Word comes that a $10,000 a year job in New York, now vacant, is to be left so, "because the incumbent would have nothing to do"—tut, tut, how very horse-and-buggy.

Congress Should Study Budget

THE idea of having a congressional committee devote two months to study of the budget presented by President Roosevelt seems quite sensible. The budget is long and complicated. Two months appears none too long to study and analyze it—unless congress is ready to accept the president's recommendations without question—which is unlikely. The needs of the nation are large and varied and the need for more national defense is obvious, but the best methods of attaining these ends are veiled in obscurity.

The need not only for clear, straight thinking, attacking the difficult problems involved with intelligence and determination, but also the need of personal integrity applied to public welfare is evident. The congressman who shouts aloud for balancing the budget, and who votes for more appropriations equally without consideration, needs to stop to think what he is doing. Certain increased appropriations are doubtless among the honest needs. Certain economies are doubtless possible. They can be reconciled and adjusted with useful results if the congress will take thought.

Shouts and oratory are not thought. Representatives are elected, in theory at least, to represent their constituents. And most constituents want neither silly extravagance in government nor ignorant niggardliness. They want the same solid sense applied to governmental affairs which they try to apply to their own.

Year of Fewest Lynchings

MORE than five thousand lynchings have occurred in the United States during the fifty-seven years since Tuskegee Institute began keeping a record. Victims have been white men as well as negroes and there have been lynchings in the North as well as in the South. Six New England states seem to have been alone in having had no lynchings during the entire period.

Great progress has been made since those earlier times when several hundred lynchings in a single year was a not uncommon experience. Only three lynchings occurred in the whole United States in 1939. There were seven in 1938, eight in 1937 and nine in 1936. This reduction encourages hope that there will soon come an entire year free from lynchings.

Lynching, and the mob violence associated with it, is not condoned by right-thinking citizens in any section of the country or any state in the Union. Lynching has never been a government policy. The forces of law and justice have striven for years to end the evil. Leaders in the South have been courageous and outspoken in their fight against it. Officers of the law in many cases have prevented lynchings at the risk of their own lives.

Reinforcements For Finland

THE FINLANDERS, now holding the European front for democracy, are still doing wonderfully well and are in command of the situation, but have probably reached the top of their strength. All their effective men are mobilized. Soon a decline in military effectiveness may begin. They themselves recognize this fact. They expect to hold the enemy during the winter, but give no assurances beyond that.

Meanwhile the Russians, although low in spirit and fighting power compared with the Finns, and somewhat demoralized by defeat, are expected to strengthen. Better troops, and more of them, are being rushed up and banked against the Finnish front. In the spring there may be a great push by the Reds to wipe out the present Russian humiliation.

The Finns must have recruits and supplies. They are beginning to get them now. And the first substantial help comes naturally from Scandinavia. The Swedes, their natural allies, now officially neutral, slip increasingly across the border. Some Norwegians, too, and others from farther off.

The neighboring democracies still preserve their technical neutrality, but they recognize the real situation and know what has to be done. It seems only a question of time, and perhaps a short time, when Scandinavians will be frankly fighting along with Finland, with supplies pouring in from the big democratic allies.

Rouge and Lipstick Banned

ANYONE looking for a controversial subject for discussion will find it in the recent order of the Springfield, Ill., health commissioner that women employes in the city health department must not wear rouge, lipstick or finger nail coloring while on the job.

While so drastic a pronunciamento will impress some persons as an unjustifiable invasion of personal liberty, others will realize that extreme cases of over-ornamentation probably brought about such an order.

The attitude of all employers toward overdone make-up is not so frankly stated as in this instance—but obvious excess of rouge, lipstick and glaring finger nail colors may account for the difficulty that some girls and women encounter in getting and holding jobs. For, after all, an office or store position is secured and held on the basis of being able to render some kind of worth while service—it isn't a beauty contest.

Petroleum and Civilization

THE AMERICAN PETROLEUM INSTITUTE says kerosene was one of the great civilizing influences of the nineteenth century. Candles and the wood fire offered little incentive to intellectual pursuits. But the good old coal-oil lamp on the dining room table gave Father a chance to mend the harness and read the paper. Mother could sew and the children could do their lessons. Or some one could read aloud while the others did handiwork.

A news commentator quotes the "Civilization." He reminds the Institute that civilization would have gone on to greater heights without petroleum. "Grandpa, for example, would have had to ride to church in a horse and buggy instead of driving grandma to go out at night."

It's hard to answer questions as to the cause of civilization. But mankind goes right on exchanging the products of its inventive genius at home and far away. Maybe future peace will bring the answers.

Watching Trends

—By PRESTON GROVER

WASHINGTON — Washington chroniclers would give a mint for the compact card-index record that Leslie Biffle keeps of those dramatic little moments of Senate history which never see daylight.

Few senators know that he keeps it. Only one, to our knowledge, ever saw any part of it. He was the late Senator Joe Robinson of Arkansas. Biffle was one of his closest confidantes.

Biffle is secretary to the Democratic majority in the Senate. He has been secretary and assistant secretary for 15 years. You can imagine the nature of some of the things that come his way—stories of the pressure put on a wayward senator to get him to vote right; the painful, or pleasurable little political deals that go on.

Like a senatorial Samuel Pepys, Biffle puts them all into his card index file in complete detail—for some future use he has not yet decided upon.

Keeps It to Himself.

MAGAZINES have offered him handsome sums for access to the material. Biff (he rarely hears his first name) refuses. We managed to pry out of him one example of what is contained in the diary—provided no names were used.

On a certain day the Senate took a three hour afternoon recess. It was near dinner time. Most of the senators went out to eat. One went for a drink or two and in an hour was well on edge. He bought a paper and from its columns read a story that enraged him.

"Where is the ——— ——— ——— who wrote that?" he stormed. Back in the cloak room he came upon Biff. "I'll get that man," he told Biff.

Later, when the Senate resumed session, the senator again came upon Biff. To Biff's amazement he exhibited two pistols, one on each hip. He was determined to violate the freedom of the press in a big way.

Biff promised to find the reporter and did. He didn't tell him all the gruesome details but emphasized what a nasty scene might break out in public. Biff is a diplomat, and the newsmen trust him, so the reporter obligingly holed up for the night. By morning all had blown over. Biff says the senator isn't in office now.

LESLIE BIFFLE is a slenderish, quietly-disposed fellow who has been working for the Senate in one capacity or another ever since he left high school in 1913. He began as clerk to the late Senator James P. Clarke of Arkansas. For a time he was superintendent of the folding room, where senatorial package mail is put together. From there, in 1925, he went to the Senate floor as assistant secretary to what then was the Democratic minority.

Biff is painstaking and methodical about compiling his quaint record. He doesn't make a daily account. He jots down a brief note, then, at night, types a summary on a stiff card. He keeps two copies, one at the Capitol and one at home—just in case.

As majority secretary he helps the majority leader round up votes on important legislation. There are many other duties as well. Of necessity, he is taken into the confidence of dozens of senators.

That is a major reason why Biff keeps his diary so secret. Once, he showed a few cards to Senator Robinson. Robinson roared with glee at some of the entries.

Biff says some day—a long time from now — he may try to do something with the stuff. If he cut loose at this time the senatorial peace would be shattered for a generation.

SOMETHING SEEMS TO BE LACKING

Listen, World!

Women Aren't Different.

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

YOU say you can't understand women. You never know how to take them—never know what they'll be up to next.

Stop trying to understand women—as women. Think of them as you'd think of men. Judge them by the standards which you'd use with a man.

There's no longer any reason why women shouldn't be judged by man's standards.

Time was when there was a tremendous chasm between man life and woman life. Nature had started the sexes out evenly enough—making them all of a piece—but society had moulded the woman into something that was neither fish, flesh nor fowl. A perverted parasitic creature, without legal rights, denied education or social experience, depending on man for her very right to live. Society had made woman live like a gopher and she thought like a gopher—circuitously, groping and conniving in the dark.

But that time has passed — much to the regret of many ladies who found it extremely convenient. Women are back where they started—sharing man life, getting whatever breaks he gets—with as good a chance to make themselves healthy, wealthy and wise.

There is no longer any reason for treating woman differently from a man . . . . or for granting her special consideration or exemption.

There are no "sex distinctions" in man and woman nature. Her brain and emotions function exactly as his function. She loves as hard, hates as hard, thinks as straight—or as crooked. And, with sensible allowance for the temporary handicaps which motherhood imposes, she's as husky an animal as he, and as able to bear her share of work and responsibility.

As for woman's boasted "intuition"—it's the bunk. Intuition is merely a woman's catch-as-catch-can way of reasoning — a technique which she developed in her long generations of gophering. Sometimes that technique is amazingly successful, and we conclude that the lady is Boojum because we cannot follow her processes, step by step. There is nothing occult about it, however.

She has merely jumped to the point faster and more recklessly than the male dares do with his more cautious and conservative training. Which fact any man would instantly recognize if he were dealing with another man instead of a "mysterious" woman.

Most of the misery between men and women is due to this tradition of "mystery." A man will stand dishonesty, cowardice, laziness, disloyalty and stupidity from a woman which he would not tolerate from a man for ten seconds, because she's "different."

He cannot yet realize that there isn't a particle of difference between male and female cussedness — that they both have the same source and can be cured by the same methods.

And usually, he doesn't want to realize it! Nothing tickles male egotism more than to think that the Dear Little Woman is less than the dust beneath his chariot wheels. And he'll stand any amount of abuse, in order to maintain this pleasing delusion. Which never fear! The Dear Little Woman understands perfectly and banks on accordingly!

Steak In Any Language.

America's first culinary congress, meeting in New York, has adopted a resolution barring foreign names from American menus. This, we are sure, is a rather welcome innovation, if restaurants and cafes will take to it.

For many a person reads a menu in French and doesn't know what he is ordering. Pommes de terre, for instance, are just plain potatoes, in American language, whether boiled, baked home fried or French fried, and tacking fancy names on them doesn't help their taste.

The culinary congress declares that printing menus in foreign languages discredits those who would perfect their knowledge of gastronomy. In other words the average American, we are sure, enjoys his eating more if he actually knows beforehand what he's going to get and doesn't have to [illegible] Chinese or dope it out.

"Friends In Need—"

A FORMER errand boy and drummer for a wholesale baking firm was one of the men who rescued Governor McKinley from bankruptcy. Herman H. Kohlsaat of Galena and Chicago, Ill., then a wealthy business man, lent McKinley financial aid when the ex-governor was involved in the failure of Robert L. Walker in February, 1893.

Son of an immigrant and not yet 40 years old, Kohlsaat was instrumental in bringing Governor McKinley to Galena when he bestowed upon his adopted town a striking likeness of General Grant and a painting of Lee's surrender.

Kohlsaat, an ardent Republican, died suddenly at Washington, October 17, 1924.

Health And Diet

Answering More Health Questions.

—By DR. CLENDENING

What are the nutritional advantages of prunes and what makes them so popular?

This question would indicate that we have passed Christmas and New Year—that we are beyond the holiday period of luxurious eating and are preparing to return to normalcy. Prunes may not be universally popular, but they are valuable dietary items.

Dried fruits are preserved fruits that have fully ripened on the tree or vine; only the water is removed in drying and their food value is concentrated in proportion to the moisture evaporated. A pound of dried fruits equals several pounds of fresh fruit, both in bulk and food value. Prunes, therefore, have good roughage value. They contain vitamins A, B and G. They also have essential minerals, such as calcium, potassium, phosphorus, iron, magnesium, copper and sulphur. They have, of course, nutritional value. Two prunes and two tablespoons of juice constitute 100 calories.

All these qualities suffice to explain why they are popular with the housewife. Besides which they are among the most economical of all breakfast fruits.

What are the dangers of low blood pressure and what should be done about it?

Low blood presure is not nearly so serious as high blood pressure. Insurance statistics indicate that low blood pressure adds materially to one's expectation of life after the age of 25, but it is likely to take a good deal of the joy out of life, the most prominent symptom being weakness. A period of low blood pressure frequently follows after an infectious disease. After the influenza epidemic of 1918 insurance examiners found an increasing number of applicants with low blood pressure.

The best treatment is to increase the weight and general nutrition.

What can you do for winter coughs that hang on?

Coughs that "hang on" are due to encysted spots of infection. Such a spot in one of the crypts of the sinuses of the nose may discharge a small amount of secretion every now and then; it seeps down the back of the throat and when it lights on the larynx, at the top of the windpipe, it starts irritation and coughing. Spray the nose with old-fashioned Dobell's solution morning and evening. Dr. Horace Dobell wrote a book "On Winter Cough," so he should be a good authority.

WASHINGTON Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—Here is the inside story of Roosevelt's secret offer of the navy secretaryship to Colonel Frank Knox:

The Chicago publisher and GOP candidate for vice president was asked to come to Washington for a private talk with the president at 4 p. m. Sunday, December 10. The meeting took place in the Oval Room on the second floor of the White House. Knox was not told the purpose of the conference, but he had a pretty good idea. However, he thought the offer would be for the army portfolio, since there had been considerable speculation that Roosevelt wanted to replace Secretary Woodring.

The president lost no time in getting down to brass tacks. He reminded Knox of the editorial he had printed in his paper shortly after the start of the European war, urging a "coalition" cabinet with several Republican members, in order to meet the emergency in a "national" rather than a partisan manner.

"I think that was good advice then, and I think it is equally sound now," Roosevelt said in effect. "As you know, the navy secretaryship is open and I'd like very much to have you take it. It's a very important job and I think you're just the man, Frank, to fill the bill."

"Thank you, Mr. President," replied Knox. "I appreciate deeply the honor you pay me. And if there were a real emergency I would be entirely at your service. But I don't think emergency conditions exist any longer, and under the circumstances I feel I'll have to decline your very kind offer.

Mrs. Cordell Hull.

FOR several years, Mrs. Cordell Hull has been looking forward to the end of her husband's service as secretary of state so that he might enjoy the autumn of his life and make it long. The thought of his undertaking a presidential campaign at 69, and then a possible four years in the White House, is more than she can bear.

Having no children to rear and no house to tend, Mrs. Hull devotes herself to caring for her distinguished husband. She frequently appears at the state department at noon and sends word by the chauffeur that she is waiting to take the secretary home to lunch. She objects strenuously to his lunching from a tray on the corner of his desk.

Hull's Florida and Carolina holidays probably never would take place but for Mrs. Hull. She persuades him to go, then makes all the arrangements.

Two years ago, when there was discussion of Hull getting the Nobel peace prize, Mrs. Hull urged her husband to resign, if and when he received the prize, and let it mark the culmination of his career.

If the greater prize of the presidency were to come within Hull's grasp, perhaps Mrs. Hull would abandon all caution for the great political lottery. But at present she, personally, is looking forward to January, 1941, as the time for taking her husband off to the comfortable havens of retirement.

Revised Dies Report.

THE final version of the Dies committee report was a lot different from the first draft, and a lot milder. A snappy argument took place in a secret session over the various bombshells it originally contained.

These bombshells had been inserted by J. B. Matthews, one of the committee investigators, who wrote the original report. Here are some of them which still remain unpublished:

"From the beginning of the Congress of Industrial Organizations down to the present time, Communists have wielded a dominant influence in its policies."

"The Communist Party, under instructions of the Soviet government, has engaged in subversive activities in the army and navy of the United States, in munitions plants and basic industries."

"There are many self-admitted members of the Communist Party who are government employes."

Also the report charged that the leadership of the United Automobile Workers and American Newspaper Guild are under Communist domination.

These sensational statements drew a flurry of protests from the three liberal members of the committee, Representatives Jo Casey (Mass.), Jerry Voorhis (Calif.), and Jack Dempsey (N. M.). They held that the charges were unsubstantiated by any evidence uncovered by the committee and merely were Matthews' personal opinions. And on a showdown the aroused liberals not only succeeded in deleting the attacked assertions, but substituted findings of their own.

Casey At Bat.

CASEY was particularly incensed at Matthews' charges against the CIO, and insisted on including in the report this statement: "The overwhelming majority of CIO members as well as the president are not Communists or Communist sympathizers."

Voorhis and Dempsey warmly supported Casey but the two GOP members, Noah M. Mason (Ill.) and J. Parnell Thomas (N. J.), vehemently objected.

"You can count me out," shouted Mason, leaping to his feet. "I won't have any truck with Lewis and his labor radicals."

"That goes for me, too," echoed Thomas.

"You're both playing cheap politics," rapped Casey. "The facts don't support you and you know it. This committee is partly responsible for the myth that the CIO is run by Reds. That is a falsehood trumped up by union haters to destroy public confidence in the labor movement. Every honest man knows that Lewis and other responsible CIO leaders are innocent of such charges."

Representative Joe Starnes (Ala.), presiding in Dies' absence, finally called for a vote, and declared Casey's statement approved 3 to 2. Starnes did not state his own position, but later explained privately: "I wanted to avoid a tie. If I had to, I would have voted against the part about Lewis."

That may or may not have been the reason. The three liberals had warned Starnes that unless Matthews' report was "cleaned up" they would submit a scorching minority report blasting Matthews and his tactics.

Note:—In his original report, Matthews also proposed a special fund to "investigate the penetration of consumer organizations by Communists."

A Red Fox

(A FARMER'S DIARY)

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

UP in the woodland that skirts our western border I saw a strange animal move cautiously close to the edge of a clearing. It had a reddish color and a marvelous bushy tail that almost trailed the ground. Its face and body was the picture of alertness as it stood still a few seconds and sniffed the air. Then it was off across the hollow, as if scenting a trail.

I stood behind a tree and hoped the fox would come nearer. He could not know that I was there for a heavy wind was blowing from the west. Quickly he turned, as if suspecting danger yet unseen and bounded off up the hollow. His movements were graceful and tireless, and even among the thick dry leaves his feet made almost no sound. I watched until his reddish coat blended into the fallen leaves, and I could not follow. I waited in that same spot quite some time, in the faint hope that he might come that way again, but it seems that instinct guides this wily creature, as well as his keen sense of sight and smell.

Within six or seven miles around, this fox will have his home. His hunting grounds are marked by definite bounds, with regard to other hunting foxes, and woe to Sir Renard should he be found with a rabbit or a pheasant draped over his shoulder while on another's premises. It might mean death, or a crippled fox for life.

When but a boy I often heard the foxes bark on clear winter nights far up the rocky mountain side. And I shall always have a distinct memory of those peculiar voices. The sound differs from the barking of a dog, and bears a message to the ear that can understand it, at different seasons.

Occasionally our neighbors would miss poultry, and sometimes our own family lost several hens. Of course the sly fox barking upon the slope received the blame. If in younger minds there might be some speculation as to how the fox could choose the hens that laid the best our father hushed us by.

I hope I may find the home of this fox family, and see the sly red vixen with her young. Observing foxy habits at close range should give some interesting first-hand information.
